ALMA MATER

Hail to thee, O Euclid High School,
To thy name all praise we sing.
Happy days of youthful pleasure,
Learning, living, life so dear.
Our hearts fill with gratitude
For all that is to be . . .
Alma Mater, Euclid High School,
All our praise we bring to thee.

Where the blue of Erie's waters
Casts the sun's bright golden rays,
There all Euclid's sons and daughters
Sing the joys of student days.
If after days be dark and drear
And storms of life draw nigh,
The memories of our friendships here
Will lift our hearts to Euclid High.

The mind perceives change

And is disquieted,

Impotent to avoid it,

Responsible for creating it.

The mind perceives the significance of change

And knows the meaning

Of before

And after.

Change is the manifestation of time in the physical world. Time paces unalterably forward, but change can often be directed. Through man's negligence, change brings decay, through his labor, achievement.

Progress results from the effective direction of change. In the modern school, mechanization provides for more efficient learning, while organized activities such as the Washington trip, Ski Club, and American Field Service give students opportunities they would likely not have been offered otherwise. These assets develop mind and body, for the student the most significant change.

The change in mind and body never ceases. Men often encounter tragic change. A shocked, unbelieving nation felt the impact of a President's death, and John F. Kennedy became a noble memory to Americans everywhere. But the pace would not stop; more changes followed, and, gradually, the nation's equilibrium was restored. Americans turned to Lyndon B. Johnson for leadership.

Former change has shaped the present,
and now thought may bring a question,
a probe inquiring into the realm of future change.

Beautiful and terrifying,
change works with steady sureness,
or bullet-like speed.

It decides the difference between today and tomorrow,
this generation and the next.

What will change bring?

Each individual can influence the answer.

Set a child to wondering and you have put him on the road

ACADEMICS

Progress is a conscious struggle for betterment through change, but conscious change is not always progress. Changes are often caused more by necessity than by the desire for improvement.

Such was the case at Euclid this year, when a surplus of students forced the advent of many changes in the school framework. Crowded hallways were relieved by up and down stairways. Classes held in the E-room and team teaching eased the logistical problem of where to put students.

Perhaps more absorbing than the administrative aspects of these changes were their effect on the attitudes of the students themselves. With the advent of these changes, the school deserted some of its acquired functions and became more an institution of learning. Continuing a trend that had begun some years before, the student developed a different attitude toward academics. He began to realize that school was a combination of intellectual and social pursuits, and that his time had to be apportioned between the two. Moreover, the stigma formerly attached to the gifted or imaginative individual by an anti-intellectual student body was removed as studying became more stylish.

This change in attitude was meaningful, for it signified maturity and a more conscious approach to the future. Today's student must be prepared to assume and develop the wisdom of his predecessors. Into his hands the present body of knowledge is placed, slowly and carefully, by its former creators. The student will soon be the creator. What will he create?

Inevitable, accelerating change must be not only acknowledged but anticipated. The good life—yes, even sheer survival—demands a sure-footed readiness for the myriad changes foisted upon us. Moreover, we need to develop the desire and power to effect changes rather than merely be affected by them. Every change is a cause-effect evolvement from pre-existing materials, events, and ideas. Only their mode of combination is new. It behooves us all, therefore, to become surely grounded in the constants of life, the unchanging principles, so that we do not confuse change with progress, to become conversant with the phenomena of change in every field and thereby to become in marked degree masters of our fate.

Lester E. Angene
Superintendent of Schools

Dr. Lester E. Angene, Superintendent of Schools.

Mr. Robert Holloway, Director of Secondary Education.

The changes noticed at Euclid High when you returned this year, and the ones you are a part of now, are excellent preparation for the era of ever-increasing change into which you are moving. My best wishes go with you for an exciting part in this coming era of change and challenge.

Mr. Robert Holloway
Director of Secondary Education

Mr. William A. Hunter, Principal.

Change can be invigorating or frightening depending on a person's frame of mind. Most individuals welcome change and enjoy the challenge which it imposes. Other persons who are not as well adjusted become apprehensive when they must meet change. They prefer the security of the status quo.

I hope as you leave high school you will accept the necessary changes in your life as opportunities to develop your total personality. The only caution I would make is that you do not become attracted to change for its own sake and that you learn to distinguish between change which represents progress and that which does not. The development of this skill will require the use of all your native intelligence and acquired knowledge.

PRINCIPALS

This was a year of transition, and few people felt the jolts of change more than our principals, Mr. Hunter, Mrs. Sheats, Dr. Bergem, Dr. Miller, and Mr. Wiley. The new ten period day, giving the administration twenty per cent more building space, also created countless student scheduling problems. Other new difficulties encountered were problems in teacher communication and staff meetings, both of which were caused by diverse teacher schedules. Questions concerning student promotion, discipline, and college applications had to be answered as usual. Thus, the principals coped with most of the old, as well as the new problems.

DEANS AND COUNSELORS

Over the summer the carpenters sawed, leveled, and pounded last year's office corridor into the present one to facilitate the new arrangement of deans and counselors, one dean and two counselors for each of the newly-developed sections. This is an addition of two deans and two counselors to the previous number. Suggestion and counsel take a part in everyone's life, and an especially large part during the high school years. The counselor concerns himself with the problems of the many students assigned to him, and in solving these problems prepares the students for the future.

ENGLISH

English classes are no longer dominated by the punctuation mark and the entangled sentence diagram. Where grammatical explanations once ruled, lectures on characterization, style in writing, and organization of themes are now more usual. Through the advent of the paperback book, students are able to read more extensively, leading to greater familiarity with books and greater depth in reading, and resulting in a better understanding of the author and his work. To further this trend in English, Euclid's English department has instituted such methods as team teaching, a program combining the talents of five teachers for the benefit of one hundred thirty juniors in college courses. An Advanced Placement program consisting of seven periods per week and an advanced composition course have also been initiated. English teachers are scheduled to teach four classes with a fifth clinic period in which they give individual attention in composition and language. Through the new drama workshop, students may see a classroom performance of a play which they are currently studying. These new advances have made this traditionally dull course one to which students look forward each day.

READING IMPROVEMENT

We are in a new era, and a new pace has been set—a fast pace. The Reading Improvement course is one method by which students can keep abreast of the times. It offers no credit, but its results more than account for the two days a week spent in the reading lab. Within a year a student's reading speed can be more than doubled and his comprehension greatly increased. Result: his time spent on reading assignments is cut in half.

Students listen intently to Mrs. Backas' informal critique of their writing.

Written tests in the reading lab measure comprehension as well as speed.

JOURNALISM

The journalist finds his reward in the completion of his product, a well-composed piece of journalism. However, the creation of this product can be a harrowing experience, for the writer must overcome the many pitfalls of the pen. His writing must be alive but not melodramatic, concise but not choppy. Sometimes he strives to arouse the reader's emotions, but he cannot be sentimental, and when his writing becomes emotional, he cannot lose logic. Journalism, more than any other type of writing, requires accuracy, for it concerns facts rather than fiction. Students of journalism gain experience by writing news articles, editorials, and themes, thus developing the varied talents of a good journalist.

DRAMA

The classroom is the stage; the assignment is "Be an amoeba," or "Show me how an apple acts;" the course is drama. Here the student learns techniques of expression and relies on the versatility of his imagination. This year, Mr. Jenkins based his program on the theater's development from primitive to modern times, a study revealing to the student how life itself has made men actors.

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

There are two obstacles to overcome in understanding the people of a foreign nation. The first of these is language. The second and more difficult is the comprehension of the thoughts which underlie the words. The knowledge of a language is not an end, but a means toward understanding these thoughts. Euclid's language department is designed with this means in mind. Culture, as well as language, is studied, leaving the student with an understanding of the differences that separate the world's people. This type of understanding is necessary if there is to be progress toward world peace.

SOCIAL STUDIES

The ancient Greek civilization, one of the greatest the world has known, could not prevent decline. The Roman civilization was mighty, but it, too, collapsed. And so it has been with all great civilizations.

Today the United States faces the same dilemmas that have perplexed all the great nations in history. We must meet the external foe at a time of internal tension. Will our nation grow stronger through strife, or will it weaken and collapse? This is a question unanswerable now, but a person equipped with a knowledge of history and human behavior can intelligently predict the results of time. More important, history shows him a course to follow if he is to aid in the betterment of the future. Winston Churchill once said, "All wisdom is not new wisdom, and the past is to be studied if the future is to be successfully encountered."

SCIENCE

The scraping of chalk over the board, the clinking of glass beakers, burets, and flasks, the staccato clacks of a geiger counter, and the click of dissecting needles are all sounds of learning and exploration. These sounds are part of the atmosphere surrounding the science student, and they become more familiar as he learns more about mitotic cell division, nuclei, the atomic theory, and projectiles. He finds that the atomic mass unit is now based on the carbon-12 isotope instead of the oxygen atom, and he realizes that what he learns is subject to continuous modification in the future when new ideas arise, for scientific history is a history not of whimsical revolutions but of continued progress towards the truths of nature. Therefore, it is important to build in the student an open and inquiring mind as well as knowledge. New programs, for example the Biological Science Study Committee, Chemical Bond Approach, and Physical Science Study Committee programs, are being developed to accomplish this. So while beakers clink and geiger counters clack, the student learns what is known now and looks forward to new theories and discoveries in science.

MATH

Mathematics changes by growing. From the seed of a few basic assumptions grows a logical system with complex subtleties. This growth has caused the department of mathematics to institute changes in curriculum and methods. In order to keep pace with an expanding mathematics, the student is taught topics not investigated in high school until recent years. He learns to use such subjects as sets, number theory, and logic as valuable tools in grasping the complexities of an abstract world.

BUSINESS

Competence is a key word for success in a highly competitive business world. Euclid's new addition to the business department, the distributive education program, teaches the student competence outside the classroom as well as in. Now, business students can gain practical experience in a parttime job, and on the same day attend classes covering such subjects as sales promotion, retail merchandising, and store organization. Cooperation between student, employer and the teacher-coordinator helps the student employee discover his weaknesses and work to improve them.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS

There is among men a love for building, for constructing something real and tangible from raw materials, for making a well-ordered structure from chaos, for repairing that which is broken. Boys participating in industrial arts find reality and order in blocks of wood, sheets of metal, nails, and lines put on paper in a mechanical drawing class. In the different shops, boards become cabinets, metal is shaped into furniture, a faulty engine is repaired to run smoothly, and dark letters form words on white paper where there were no words before.

Mr. Fred Vollman, Department Chairman.

DRIVING

Driving is a class which requires continual alertness and concentration, one which will not tolerate a wandering mind, a daydream. From memorization of rules and parts to application of his newly acquired knowledge, the student progresses, conditioning his reflexes and learning his capabilities.

ART

Since the objective of a high school art course is to develop talent and individual expression, the student must be prepared to cope with a different mode of education. His text is his own ideas, his pen a brush, and his material a set of paints. In his work there is relaxation and real interest; he is the force behind the plan, a plan open to change, open to contrast, open to color.

A variety of artistic talent was displayed at Open House.

Just practicing.

HOME ARTS

It is considered in poor taste for a student to display his "A" English composition by wearing it pinned on his back. This is obvious. However, the home arts student has a unique advantage over the English student, for she can wear, and in good taste, the results of her achievements. Well-made, carefully fitted clothes are her reward. But this is only her immediate reward, for the home arts student can look forward to establishing her own home, sewing and cooking for her own children, utilizing the experience she has gained in high school.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION

September brought a return to books and studies, and also to sports and phys. ed. classes. Girls adjusted to their new teachers, and boys underwent regulation, even to new matching shirts, but alternate complaints and enthusiasm assured us that otherwise all was normal. As in the past, we twisted ourselves on parallel bars, forgot the rules when the score was 15-14, and afterwards made frantic two-step dashes up the down stairway to another class.

Trampoline puts a bounce in school life.

MUSIC

Music breaks the monotony of a routine day. In a music class the student responds differently than in any other class. His response is one of the emotions rather than the intellect, feeling instead of reason. Thus, the music class is more than an exercise in sound; it is the perceiving of a different mode of expression.

VOCATIONAL COORDINATOR

The new position of vocational coordinator, a post created to help students secure part time jobs, was filled by Mr. Robert Yocum. As coordinator, his work is to match the student's abilities with the requirements of the job, thus proving helpful to both employer and employee.

ADJUSTED CURRICULUM

The Adjusted Curriculum classes help the student with the practical rather than the theoretical side of academics. He is provided with skills adaptable outside the classroom which will be particularly beneficial after graduation. SCHOOL TREASURER

Isolated from the stream of student activity by a glass partition, Mr. Coatsworth, the school treasurer, labors with the tremendous task of balancing Euclid's books. Though most students know him only as the man behind a bus pass, his job is fundamental to the working of the school.

SECRETARIES

To Euclid's secretaries, the students are I.B.M. cards, names on a piece of paper, noise in the halls. To Euclid's students, the secretaries are those women behind desks, files, and typewriters. They represent a part of the school essential for proper function, and a part we scarcely know. Although they are usually busy, they always take time to answer a question, or to help us if they can.

KITCHEN AND MAINTENANCE STAFF

The kitchen and maintenance staff at Euclid are often little recognized for the amount of work they do. They are often the first to come and the last to leave, handling the many functional problems of our school.

UNDERCLASS

Every locker looks the same to a sophomore. His first day at E.H.S. is unfamiliar and confusing. As he walks along the vast, prison-like corridor, people dart out at him from the walls and vanish back into them. In his first class his teacher asks, "Are there any questions about the school?" Either timidness or bewilderment prevents him from raising his hand. But in time strangeness fades to familiarity. He recognizes his locker by the paper sticking out at the top, and by the familiar scratches on it. He has been to the E-Room, bought a season's pass, joined World Affairs, and, in general, established himself as a member of E.H.S. The year ends; another begins. As a junior he returns with new prestige. He finds his assigned locker without difficulty, and he strolls through the hall, certain he can find his destination in the allotted five minutes. At first the changes in the school routine caused by the ten-period day perplex him. But soon, his equilibrium restored, he relaxes in the familiar surroundings, even daring to wander into the halls without a hall pass. He settles into the routine of the school day, and he finds security in the same old lockers, and last year's unmended cracks.

The adolescent houses a variety of contradictory forces. He is a beatnik and a conformist.

His moments of depression regularly alternate with periods of excessive joy.

He is a turbulence of emotions.

His love can be both serious and carefree.

A young girl knows sophistication as she dresses for a prom, but the next afternoon at a picnic she will play baseball and swing on the swings with complete abandon, and she'll laugh as she exclaims that she has entered her second childhood.

The adolescent is instructed, and he sees a method. By following, he learns to lead.

Give us strength to accept with serenity the things that cannot be changed. Give us the courage to change the things that can and should be changed. And give us wisdom to distinguish one from the other.

-Admiral Hart

SPORTS

As teachers patrolled the halls and lunch periods were divided, only the athlete's realm seemed unaffected by the new order. Yet his world was not without alteration, for it has always been created from a progression of changes.

The season opens, and the boys are numbers on a list, inexperienced, but hopeful. The coaches impose a rigorous program of training. Some boys can take it; others won't. As these individuals grow in ability and efficiency, a kind of emotional glue binds them together. Individual importance changes to team importance. A unity is formed from the pressure of a close match, or a strong desire to win. Victory and defeat become common property, meaningful to all. A successful play on the part of one member arouses pride in the others. A block has been formed to meet the opponent, and the acquired skills have become part of a framework designed to score.

Friday marks the test, and Euclid becomes aware of the sport. The athlete earns confidence and recognition. He is able to look back and laugh at those first spastic days of training.

HOMECOMING

Preparation for Homecoming involved more than cornering that special person for a date. From the beginning of September, boys curtailed their reckless spending, and girls eyed dress displays, hoping.

Finally it was "the weekend." Rising flames of Friday's bonfire kindled the already high spirits and on Saturday afternoon, in an explosion of cheers, the Panthers struggled with the Shaker Raiders. Soon the victory bell pealed loudly across the field, and girls hurried to keep appointments with their hairdressers. That night, couples danced among cacti, and the queen on a ranch-type throne reigned "Under Western Skies."

CROSS COUNTRY

The air is heavy with tension and a smell of wintergreen. Suddenly a shot echoes, and the runners are transformed. They no longer seem solid and bound to the cinders. Dimensionless projectiles of momentum stretch on snake-like ribbons between the trees. Then the spell is broken. Human strength had been pushed to super-human limits. Gasping, exhausted, the lead man crosses the line.

TRACK

Run, Bill, run. Run fast, Bill. See Bill run. Jump up, Bob. See Bob jump. Jump, jump, jump. See John. John works hard. See John put the shot. Put, put, put. With such simple formulas as these and hours of grueling practice, Euclid's track team won, and won, and won.

I'll huff and I'll puff. . .

BASKETBALL

For every sport, a new life begins with each season. A sport does not live entirely in the playing of the game. However, each contest is an important event in its life, an event that provokes joy, sadness, or shame.

The Panthers' '64 basketball season was born optimistically under the sign of victory. However, this victory over Shaw was not a trustworthy omen, for defeat followed closely. Despite Rick Creveling's outstanding performance, including his recordbreaking 49 points against Kenston, and the team's victory in their first two games in District competition, Euclid's basketball season ended its life in defeat. With a record of eight wins and thirteen losses, basketball went into dormancy at Euclid. Perhaps, when it begins life again, more consistently favorable fortune will accompany it.

Now all it has to do is go through the hoop.

I wonder if we'll win, Macks?

Well, Doc, do you think we can win?

Play nice, or I'll take my ball and go home.

Hey, the bosket's moving.

CHEERLEADERS

Summer evenings are hot, long and lingering. The park on a summer evening brings the sound of a small white tennis ball against a large green board and animated shouts of an over-crowded basketball court. Summer evenings mean pony league games, sailboats in the pond, and a tired group of swimmers. Euclid High is a part of the scenery, and behind its large frame, away from the general activity, more sounds can be heard. They are voices that shout, "Blue and Gold" and "Victory is our cry." They are cheerleaders and girls hoping to become cheerleaders. They are winter's spirit in summer practice and a part of the Panther pride. Originating as sound in the park, the voices grow stronger as the various sports come alive and ability is challenged.

Synchranized spirit.

JUNIOR VARSITY BASKETBALL

In the shade cast by the popularity of the varsity team, the J.V. basket-ball team sprouted and grew in the absence of roaring cheers and the gaze of huge crowds. Great recognition is not necessary for sturdy development and quality, a fact proved by the J.V. team's record—ten wins and eight losses.

BOWLING

There are ten pins at the end of a bowling alley. A beginner's skill at knocking down these pins can be attributed to luck for he achieves strikes and gutter balls, one right after the other. For the proficient bowler, strikes are not a matter of luck, and gutter balls are not easily endured. The perfect frame must come frequently if the opponent is to be defeated.

Quick reflexes guide a steady racket.

TENNIS

A tennis court appears small until, within its bounds, one has the traumatic experience of chasing after a little white ball. Only then can proper respect be given to the tennis team whose members have conquered both the size of the court and the elusive ball. Although admiration for their skill and for the hours they spend in practice is highly deserved, the team itself was disappointed with the results of the 1963 fall season. They finished third in the L.E.L. with a record of four wins and three losses. Coach Nold felt that the team had great potential which was not realized, and he looked forward to a more promising spring season.

It looks like a strike!

WRESTLING

Wrestling is a very rewarding sport for well-muscled and coordinated physics students, for a sound body and a healthy knowledge of the laws of leverage and their applications in this field postulates almost certain victory. Unfortunately, Euclid's team of mat scientists accumulated a sufficient amount of experimental error to place them third in L.E.L. competition, but, this error corrected, the team completed its season as District Champions.

A J.V. wrestler is a rather unusual kitten. Although he follows in the varsity shadow of a Panther, he is nonetheless ferocious and determined. He learns from watching, and by combining both body and mind for quick, forceful action, he prepares and conditions his skill. The J.V. mat, although it is second place to the spectator, is often the scene of stamina rewarded with a triumphant pin.

VARSITY SWIMMING

Skimming across the Caerulean deep of the swimming pool, Euclid's Leanders splashed their way to a 5-11 record. Neither a deus ex machina nor the will of the implacable Fates was responsible for their victory. Rather, confidence and skill, gained from many hours of training, plus a bit of team spirit proved their worth in races won and near-perfect dives.

ACTIVITIES

The characteristics of the different species of club members are diverse and interesting. Some run wildly through the halls, slapping posters on the walls; some pass out spirit; some are quiet and thoughtful; some are bored. Others make loud noises and giggle; a few clack on typewriters for money. Some sit and listen, while many give helpful advice. One makes speeches; a few prepare programs for computers. Some of the more well-rounded club participants have many of these characteristics. For instance, after sitting quietly listening, one member collects money, debates, develops pictures, makes noises, giggles, and plays chess.

These diverse activities promote diverse interests, and Euclid High boasts an extra-curricular activities program which covers almost every field of student interest. These clubs represent the "other half" of school life and offer a pleasant ending to a regulated daily schedule.

This year the student has been confronted with new opportunities and difficulties. The advent of the Ski Club, the Political Affairs Club, and the Varsity Bowl Team has permitted him even more versatility, but the split schedule conversely has hindered his club activity. In some cases, club membership decreased, and it was realized that, more than ever before, activities required interesting programs and wide-spread publicity for success.

In spite of the problems the new year brought, students did not cease to participate in this other side of E.H.S. As always, they hurried to meet deadlines, gave hours for various causes, and made friends through common interests.

E-ROOM

Our E-Room was built six years ago, and still remains as beautiful as it was in the beginning. A deserted E-Room is an uncommon sight to Euclid High students, but it effectively displays the room's size and spaciousness.

E-ROOM

As the center of Euclid's social life, the E-Room holds for many the remembrance of happiness as well as sorrow. Here is the setting of some of high school's fondest memories, a first homecoming, the Senior Prom, a coke after school. Here, also, many remember the sorrow felt in a disillusioning date, or an evening when that special person showed up with someone else. But for more than all these things, the E-Room is remembered by the alumni as the friendliest place in the school.

No, Dr. Bergem, my son wouldn't do anything like that!

EUCLIDIAN BUSINESS STAFF

Most high school students use money chiefly as a pass through the lunch line or the means for a Saturday night date. This was not the case for Euclidian Business Staff members because theirs was the responsibility of financing one of the biggest business transactions in the school. They collected money from students, worked at the concessions stands, handled underclass pictures, and sold ads in the community. The staff members gained practical experience in the business world, while the school received a yearbook of quality.

SURVEY EDITORIAL STAFF

With the inauguration of the use of flo-sheets, the Survey Editorial Staff seemed to find itself organized for the first time. To be sure, there were still the usual songfests, scandals, and interior decorating schemes, but nevertheless, the Survey managed to earn once again a rating of first in the National Scholastic and the Columbia Scholastic Press Associations. Not at all vain because of their triumph, the Survey members continued their policy of peaceful coexistence with their pals, the Euclidian staff.

SURVEY BUSINESS STAFF

Don't ever let anyone say the '63-'64 Survey Business Staff wasn't busy. Any member will give an enthusiastic account of the time involved, the ads sold, and the problems encountered by circulation and distribution of the paper. Although extremely money-minded, the staff turned "editorial" during the week preceding all home games. Theirs was the task of publishing the sports programs, a feat accomplished under the pressure of deadlines and hard work. With Mr. Mize giving advice and Norm Stewart directing assignments, the business staff always finished on schedule, with time remaining to plan new sales gimmicks or parties.

SENIOR SCANDAL

The Senior Scandal is not a work of art, an aesthetic creation, or a memorial to the senior class. It is, as its name implies, a revelation of the many "scandals" boasted by the senior class. With each class trying to outdo the one before, the Scandal always discloses tales of the unusual and off-beat, proving itself good for a laugh and sometimes a bit of embarrassment.

SPECTRUM

Once again Spectrum experienced an overwhelming response to its call for interested students. Dedicated to the absorption of culture, the club continued to foster its edifying activities. Beginning the year with an investigation of costume design, Spectrum held its annual Halloween party. Its many later activities continued the Spectrum tradition of bringing culture to the multitude.

STUDENT COUNCIL

Under the direction of Mr. Hoffert, Mr. Raicevich, Miss Alexander, and President Greg Dane, the Student Council tackled both routine and new problems. Homeroom representatives were replaced by division representatives, and committees designed for specific duties dominated the council. The executive board, in particular, felt the responsibility of authority, filling ninth period meetings with ideas and plans that would influence the entire school. The students were informed of these plans by way of bulletin board, and sometimes, inaccurately, by rumor. Whether debating graduation procedure or creating a "Name the Dance" contest, the Student Council was a part representing the whole.

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC

The Euclid High bands are more than a collection of students who play instruments. They are models of esprit de corps. To sense this, one need only enter the bandroom, the second home of many band members. Here exists an atmosphere of amity among individuals whose only common interest may be music. Whether rehearsing a quintet, watching girls, or playing keep away with a chosen victim's purse, this same spirit persists. Minutes later, a bell rings and Mr. Harper ascends the podium. Harmony of a different nature is heard in the bandroom.

CHOIRS

A sheet of choral music is short-lived, but it has a soul hidden among its blotted physical aspects, and its life need not be dull. A sheet of choral music lives when it is being learned by a chorus. At Euclid it suffers a harsh beginning when it is sight-read for the first time. As it listens to the monotonous repetition of its own parts and the chatter that goes on during these repetitions, it can scrutinize the closelyknit mass of tired, excited, and studious heads that are making all the noise, and, when this becomes unbearable, it can delight in Mr. Taylor's explosive "Dad-gum-it! Why don't you people listen instead of . . .!" and "Don't talk it! Sing it!" But all this while the chorus has been learning and polishing. The sheet of choral music dies as its soul is committed to the memory of the chorus members.

Hey, Doc, is all that lung stuff true?

Cannie Tuthill takes an oral beating.

Harvey appeared only off-stage.

HARVEY

Did you see a tall white rabbit? Yes, you probably did during the week of October 21, when Harvey roamed the halls of Euclid. This rabbit's purpose was to persuade students to attend the play bearing his name. For those who went, there were several hours of memorable, sophisticated comedy. Although Harvey did not appear visibly during the performance, he became a true personality in the minds of the audience.

Backstage, nervous whispering is silenced minutes before $\ensuremath{\text{\i}}_{\ensuremath{\text{\i}}}$ the curtain rises.

CAMERA CLUB

The shutterbugs of Euclid High School can be identified by their dilated pupils and chemically chapped hands. In a remodeled third-floor closet, they create images with special paper, light, and skill. This club serves a dual purpose: the members gain experience for a possible profession, and the school receives inexpensive photographic service.

MOVIE CLUB. First Row (L to R): Paul Pavlik, Bob Evangelisto, Steve Hatras, Wolter Scuttenberg. Second Row: Wayne Karberg, Ron Miller, Ken Colemon, Joe Mustar.

MOVIE CLUB

In the silent study hall the soft rattle of casters is heard passing the door; a projector is being delivered by the trusty movie club member with his ridiculously large wooden hall pass knocking around his knees. "You're finally here. I hope the watchamagadget doesn't break down again. Can you set it up for us?" "No, sorry, I've got three more to deliver this period." Off he goes, and in the silent study hall a pair of squeaky shoes and a clattering hall pass are heard returning past the door.

STAGE CREW

"Get the hammer, nails, saw some wood, but measure it first. Bring the lights down for adjusting. How long is this flat? The frame's ready for canvassing. Where's the staple gun? Here! Where? The sizing is ready, so get some brushes. Don't get sloppy with that stuff! Shall we paint it chartreuse or pink? Oh, well! We'll mix them and see what we get. Who stole my paint brush? Turn those lights on . . ." So on into the night.

INTERNATIONAL QUILL AND SCROLL

A small gold I.Q.S. pin is like a medal. It represents an honor based on creativity and outstanding achievement in the field of publications. Membership is determined by effort and ability, extending to the writer, photographer, and salesman alike. For the individual, the pin also is a memory. It recalls the many moods of a staff and the processing activity involved before a finished product is attained. The layouts of Euclidian become a book, the Survey comes out, Eucuyo copy is collected, edited and printed, and a small gold I.Q.S. pin is worn.

Long hours of practice and a few minutes of speaking precede long hours of waiting in anticipation of a judge's decision. Although maintaining good grades causes unwelcome pressure on students busy with activities, and early, sleepy awakenings for long Saturday morning trips are rather inconvenient, members of National Forensic League must take these annoyances in stride with their activity. Participating in the areas of extemporaneous speaking, dramatic, humorous, and oratorical declamation, debate, and original oratory, Mr. Robuck's hardy group works to learn, improve performance and achieve tournament victories.

FUTURE BUSINESS LEADERS OF AMERICA

Two business courses and a desire to investigate the commercial world qualify a student to join the Future Business Leaders of America. Speakers emphasize the pitfalls and inconveniences of the business world; but few members are discouraged. The old adage, "Knowledge is half the battle," keynotes the entire group.

F.B.L.A. First Raw (L to R): Rita Marthin, Kathy Pearson, Diane Brule, Nancy Emser, Pam Rudiak, Laura Klemenc, Laurel Eppich, Eddie Becay, Paulo Simkins. FUTURE TEACHERS OF AMERICA

F.T.A.'s members, America's future teachers, receive actual teaching experience through the club's pet project, student tutoring. Capable club participants volunteer their time to help conscientious students who apply for a tutor. These "teachers" receive a feeling of satisfaction and accomplishment from their tutoring sessions, and they are proud when their "pupils" show signs of improvement and earn an "A" test paper. Satisfaction also extends to the pupil, who is grateful for the help he has received from F.T.A.

FUTURE NURSES CLUB

One of Euclid's many organizations that aid in career preparation is the Future Nurses Club. Its main function lies in the clinical work done by members during free periods. By working with the school nurses and witnessing the problems and situations they encounter, girls gain valuable field experience. Knowledge of the profession is furthered by speakers from nursing schools and associations, explaining many different aspects of the work involved.

FRIENDSHIP CLUB

In the shuffling of many club activities, Friendship also emerged under a new guise. The Friendship Formal, a tradition for which the club previously had been noted, did not take place, and Friendship became foremost a service club, comparable to the boys' Key Club. Although it got off to a late start, Friendship was more active than ever before, performing both, service and social functions.

JUNIOR RED CROSS CLUB

Concerned with local areas of need, members of Junior Red Cross based their club on service projects, which ranged from play acting to hospital decorating. Under the direction of Mrs. Cox, and working in conjunction with the National Red Cross, the club filled Monday night meetings with plans and ideas designed for the benefit and enjoyment of others.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

Membership in N.H.S. is one of the most highly coveted honors a high school student may achieve. The N.H.S. pin recognizes academic excellence, service to the school, leadership, and, above all, character. A sign of versatility and achievement, it is worn often and with pride.

SCIENCE SEMINAR

Microwave Amplification by Stimulated Emission of Radiation, affectionately abbreviated to maser, was only one of the many current advances in science investigated by the Joe Berg Science Seminar. Students in this year's enlarged program kept up with modern trends as they were addressed by scientists from the Cleveland area. Excursions to research sites furnished an opportunity to see theories and principles put into application. Whether learning how we really see, or exploring subjectivity versus objectivity, seminar students gained a superior introduction to the world of the scientist.

CHESS CLUB

Among the lesser known species of extracurricular activities is the Chess Club. Tuesday of every week a few surprisingly ordinary looking people enter an empty classroom during the tenth period and commence playing chess while discussing anything that comes up, chess for instance. However, it is during these informal meetings that the members prepare themselves for forthcoming tournaments of wit materialized on chess boards. The club is small, but it proved potent enough to bring home a State High School Championship.

MATH CLUB

Dedicated to the prosecution of the controversial and the extraordinary of mathematics, the Math Club was once again managed and addressed by its own members. This year the club concentrated upon an investigation of computer programming. When computer time at Case was obtained, the members set to work on practice problems. Under the guidance of Charles Reno, they devised programs for such operations as finding factors, primes, and cube roots.

KEY CLUB

The primary function of the Key Club is to serve the school and community. Key Club prospers on sales of peanut brittle, fruit cakes, Christmas trees, and Panther badges, while they manifest this prosperity in their usefulness to Euclid. Although quantitatively and qualitatively they are the greatest Key Club in the nation, they do not hesitate even to install lowly public garbage cans where they are needed. Beside the service committee, there is an active social committee which ensures an ample balance of fun for the hard-working members.

POLITICAL AFFAIRS

Eventually every subject from integration to automation finds a place on the agenda of the Political Affairs Club. The debates are seldom according to rule, but the participants are always well informed and very eager to express their opinions. Controversy is the basis of the club; argument is the purpose.

High school students generally choose to forget the many unpleasant problems of the world. However, members of World Affairs Club have a more realistic attitude, for they are aware of these problems and choose to pursue the reasons and the solutions that lie somewhere within them. This club helps its members toward a better understanding of the world, and it prepares them to assume adult responsibility and leadership.

FOREMAN'S CLUB

In everything there must be a leader and many who follow; an Industrial Arts course is no exception. Certain boys, characterized by their unusual leadership and manual abilities, are chosen to assist in supervising and teaching these classes. Of such is the Foreman's Club composed.

P. A. CLUB

Among the many clubs hindered by the "great schedule change," the P.A. Club was faced with a major loss of activity. Those once cheerful morning announcements were replaced by signs, bulletin boards, and occasional breaks in fourth period classes. Yet P.A. Club remained a necessary function, with members prepared to handle any emergency announcements or technical problems.

AMERICAN FIELD SERVICE COMMITTEE

Members of the A.F.S. Student Committee perform two services for the school; they act as a welcoming committee to the foreign exchange student, and they assist in the presentation of the foreign films by making posters and collecting tickets. Although their work is not widely recognized, it is important because it helps a very significant organization, the American Field Service, to run smoothly.

STUDENT SUPPLY STORE

In order to cope with this year's population explosion, the bookstore was moved from its former "cubby hole" to a larger and more suitable location. Sales promotion, although deprived of the traditional morning announcements, included signs, holiday decorations, contests, and of course, Mr. Amster's persuasive voice. Euclid's first combination book and supply store, carrying a stock that ranged from Lord of the Flies to cough drops, was a convenience for both students and teachers.

WAI NAPOLO

Bound together by some espirit de corps and a few wild parties, the Swim Club is one of the most closely-knit organizations in the school. The primary activity of its members is to aid in teaching the swimming classes, a commission well-merited through their knowledge of strokes, experience, and perfection in diving. When not engaged in teaching or parties, Wai Napolo prepares for the annual Swim Show, that spirited spectacular of music, skits, and synchronized swimming.

SKI CLUB

Students following such ordinary pursuits as chess, football, music, or journalism can find on outlet for their interest in the school's extra-curricular program. Until this year, those possessed with a yearning for skiing could only contain it or seek satisfaction outside the school. The creation of Euclid's Ski Club relieved this deficiency. Its new members gave up Saturdays to journey to Mount Chalet, where they pursued this vigorous and unusual sport.

"Line up!" is the familiar cry of the girls' leader at the beginning of her class period. She can remember when she first made this call, feeling selfconscious as she stood before thirty pairs of eyes. Gradually, she developed confidence in herself, and now her daily command never lacks authority. She has learned how to handle and lead a class with the assurance that they will follow and respect her. Soon the dismissal bell rings, and one hears her yell, "You're excused!" The students file out the door.

Euclid's world of sports is open to female participation through the Girls' Athletic Association. Not all of the members are particularly skilled, but most have the spirit and interest that provide for competition and a good game. In after-school tournaments, teammates share the excitement of activity and the friendships upon which the teams are based. The individual contest of pitcher versus batter, and the unity behind a strong volleyball squad are all part of a club encouraging fun. Involving more than the sport, G.A.A. means a noisy gym, a cheer for the opponent, a powder fight, and always a laugh.

SPIRITS CLUB

Spirit. School spirit exists in an intangible and fleeting form and often needs encouragement. The Spirits Club provides the necessary spark. Gliding about at secret night meetings, the "spirits" leave their marks on posters displayed in the halls and signs distributed on the days of sports events. As subtly as they promote enthusiasm, they mask their identities as true spirits.

Being in Spirits doesn't make us saints.

Youth is the opportunity to do something and to become somebody.

SENIORS

A poet might have written: "Oh! To be in Euclid as a senior."

An anthropologist would have commented upon the senior oligarchy. A biologist might have studied the various levels of organization among the classes. Yet all would agree that the seniors occupy a superior position at Euclid High.

To deprive the school of the senior class would deprive it of its main source of heroes, its largest producers of school spirit, and its most abundant collectors of honors. The senior class contains more dreamers standing on the welcome mats of their dreams, more mixed-up emotion scrambled into one group and more opinionated people than any class in the school.

Frivolity and extremity accompany the senior year. Seniors guided by the notion that an end should be glorious, attend countless graduation parties, exert their authority over the underclass, and scream class supremacy. However, there is a serious aspect to the senior year which is often overlooked. What is to follow graduation? College? A summer job? Does Uncle Sam really want me? Questions affecting a lifetime are answered, and the sobriety of the decision demonstrates that the senior year is one of thought as well as of gaity.

THE FOUR - WAY TEST

OF THE THINGS WE THINK, SAY AND DO:

- 1. IS IT THE TRUTH?
- 2. IS IT FAIR TO ALL CONCERNED?
- 3. WILL IT BUILD GOODWILL AND BETTER FRIENDSHIPS?

This Four-Way Test is now being used successfully around the world in business, government and schools as an effective measuring stick for conduct. It is a guide to RIGHT thinking. If memorized and constantly applied to relations with others, it will make a definite contribution toward more effective and friendlier relationships.

If you get into the habit of checking your thoughts, words and deeds against the Four-Way Test, the experience of others has shown that it will help you become happier and more successful.

Each year the editor is asked to write a little thank you note for the last page of the book. I never realized how sincere those thank you notes really were until now; now when my book, or rather your book, is finished. This page is the hardest for me to write because there is no end to the number of thanks I owe.

The production of the Euclidian is a challenging experience. I was merely a deadline agree and a pencil sharpener. It is my staff that deserves the credit and thanks. There were times when nerves were frayed and tempers were at a point of near explosion, but behind every storm is a calm. As this Euclidian began to fall together like a picture puzzle, and the end results could be seen, it became the staff's book, no longer mine. They were pleased with their creation. The tempers, tears and turmoil have now subsided, leaving pleasant memories of hard work and a rewarding product. From this experience have grown many friendships and even one or two new romances. Our Euclidian is more than simply a record of the school year; it is a learning and developing process, a headache, and the most cherished 320 pages my staff will probably ever own.

My staff includes more than 19 other students. Its most vital and influential number has yet been unmentioned. Without our sponsor, Mr. Eisen, our hall passes wouldn't have been signed, our verbs wouldn't have been so active and our parties wouldn't have been such successes. Among his other duties, he always found the time, patience and energy to put up and keep up with this year's staff and their antics. There always seemed to be time in his day to help. I would also like to thank Mrs. Eisen personally for letting us monopolize her husband so often this year.

The administration, Mr. George, Mr. Santos and the Euclidian business staff deserve a star on the forehead. If it hadn't been for Judy Strausbaugh's go-getters, the book may not have existed. I'm not sure where the word "Pantherational" came from, but it must have served its purpose. The ads staff also deserves recognition. There was a lot of finesse, fast talking and shoe leather put into the sale of those ads which financed much of the production.

There has to be a thanks to the custodial staff, and Louis is the man who has earned it. For the last nine months he has helped us keep our office clean and has handled with affectionate understanding the stragglers who have trouble evacuating the office by the five o'clock curfew.

During the course of the year, the folks at Raimor's have given us wonderful service, salvaging overexposed pictures and meeting urgent deadlines. Finally, thanks to Mr. L. O. Kisabeth of Gray Printing and Mr. Schoen of the S. K. Smith Cover Company for their technical advice and assistance. These unheralded services are deeply appreciated.

As of March 15, my year is over, my baby is born and I retire to the rank of normal senior. But I shall not forget the help of all the people I've mentioned, and you, Euclid High, whose support has made the 1964 Euclidian possible. I hope it recalls as many memories for you as it will for me.

For some it starts on the first day of second semester. A few mark time from a climactic event, while most, too busy or perhaps unwilling to catch on, wait until the first day of the last six weeks to acknowledge the imminent end of the school year. Spring precedes the end, puzzling its way through a maze of madras. Madras shirts, skirts, blouses, shoes, and watchbands splatter the halls in colorful conformity. It is a plaid badge of courage; to be without it inflicts psychological injury. It is tirelessly washed, dutifully bled. Give a student a piece of madras, and he and his wounded ego will be properly dressed.

For the student himself, the end of the year does not evolve completely from a plaid-glad world. Classes mean struggling: to stay awake, pull a C, and channel spring-bound enthusiasm toward an elusive subject. A classroom steeped in boredom alternates pressurized learning with apathetic note-taking. Confusion and mixed emotions parallel the plaids. Minds turn on and off with a maximum effort to concentrate or relax. Relaxation, once realized, is converted into activities, the watery techniques of Swim Show, rehearsals for the Spring Musical, and frantically-written copy for the Euclidian Supplement.

Accordingly, the year ends with sidelong glances, assorted proms, and baccalaureate. Recognition comes on a clear, warm night in June, officially marked by a white sheet of paper. The calendar relates the close, the student perceives it, then the date discarded; for truly the end comes in the mind. This finality is the last expression.

STUDENT COUNCIL ELECTIONS

Starting unobtrusively, with a handful of "We Try Harder" buttons on a selected few, the election campaign quickly becomes more vocal in nature. Euclid's sedate pink and orange halls are soon emblazoned with the superior qualifications of one candidate or another. A combination of off-key music, raucous demonstrations, and ribald posters overwhelm the student. It is not until the nominees make their speeches in the auditorium that he can associate a face with a slogan, a candidate with an idea, and arrive at a decision.

Barb and Marie receive o plaque from the Sove the Children Foundation.

N. F. L.

Following a year of long hours and short weekends, the N.F.L. held its long awaited induction ceremony. Although only in its second year, this observance has already wrought several changes in the club. Designed to give deserved stature to the group, it has made N.F.L. a notable organization, its pin a symbol of achievement and excellence.

BASEBALL

For a moment, the crack of wood forcefully meeting leather resounds throughout the diamond, and the small spherical figure quivers in the air. A confused scramble, jubilant possessian, and the unruly object is tamed to work for Euclid. Even a bouncing ball is controllable, illustrated by Euclid's tie for first in the L.E.L.

GOLF

Golf concerns a determined player, shiny equipment, and one small, obnoxious ball. In the early spring the ball submits to the player's rusty stroke as it is propelled through the air. It lands with a subdued thump in a wooded area. Unfortunately, the intensive search for the ball ends with an extra five strokes. With triumphant weariness, the player, preceded by the ball, reaches the sacred eighteenth green. The season progresses with this paradox: fewer strokes and more victories.

TENNIS

Hardly a mass participation sport, tennis at Euclid is distinguished by its excellence. The whiteclad perfectionists seldom achieve gallery glory. Instead, the elusive ball, returned again and again, surrenders to the individual's mastery. Fittingly, the season passes with victorious matches and meets, and the individual's satisfaction.

TRACK

Taut, expectant, the runner crauches at the starting line. As he awaits the crack of the gun, his mind reviews the countless factors important to a well-run race. His spikes gouge the tracks. His fingers nervously search the cinders for a hold. Suddenly he is transformed into a blur of blue and gold, his fears submerged in his desire to excel.

SWIM SHOW

The oppressive heat filled Euclid's natatorium. Capacity crowds languidly fluttered programs until Swim Clubbers converted the pool into a make-believe array of books. Instantly, the water came alive with assorted faces, shapes and ideas. A venerable "Reluctant Dragon" appeared sporting blue and gold scales. Turning from fantasy to satire, James Bumm, "Agent 006 7/8" answered Wai Napolo's need for high adventure. In keeping with the dangerous deeds of the hero, three senior boys executed a series of comedy dives, complete with a precarious bicycle drive off the high board. A dainty Snow White beckoned her dwarfs and seven gracefully appeared. Senior girls gave their rendition of Arabian mysticism. "Wai Napolo of 1965" saluted themselves in a grand finale and the audience succumbed once more to the heat of the evening.

TALENT SCOUTS

Shadowed lights dimmed the stage as melancholy chords drifted over the still audience. Swiftly the atmosphere changed to one of frivolity as a bubbly amateur chorus line hoofed its way across the stage. Talent Scouts '65 was under way. Folk singers, jozz artists, dancers and musicians capered before the skeptical though pleased audience. Euclid High once again displayed its talented unknowns.

A. F. S.

Chosen to represent American youth in countries abroad, Margaret Nielson and Ron Karash await the final decision. The students are partially supported by the profits from the annual A.F.S. movies, a fund which is supplemented by penny fines for speaking English in foreign territories: the language lob and language classes.

Strangling mather-love

The Soft Shoe

BIG SHOW

It was a small kingdom, ruled over by a talkative queen and a mute king. A complete reversal of the famed "Princess and the Pea," Once Upon A Mattress replaced all of the sugary fairytale's saccharine appeal with Medieval hoopla and Twentieth Century pazazz. Amy Picciano headed the cast as Winnifred, the man-hungry princess who swam the moat, boisterously asserted she was shy, and had enough energy left to lead the kingdom through a rollicking fight song of love and the exhausting Spanish Panic. Unwittingly, Winnifred passed her royalty test: a sleepless night on twenty downy mattresses — and a set of jousting equipment. The Princess got her man, court lovers were reunited, and Queen Aggrivane's martyrized prattle was silenced. The make-believe kinadom and the lively cast lived happily-exhausted ever after.

ART SHOW

A student wanders about the maze of paintings, both abstract and conventional. Who are the artists? Dali? Rubens? Euclid students? He travels through portraits, landscapes, and photographs, met by an array of collages, sketches, sculptures, and crafts. He becomes downcast, then joyful, his mixed emotions reflecting the various media.

SENIOR TWIST DANCE ALL-SCHOOL PARTY

Privileges are characteristic of the senior year. It is clear to the seniors that they deserve them. This isn't evident to administration, and superficial expressions of seniority have been reduced to knee socks on Friday. Hence, the precedential Senior Twist Dance came as a triumph, and the graduating class ponied, jerked, and Watusied in knee socks and glory.

Those who crave privileges before the senior year can appease themselves at the All-School Party. Students can wear madras bermudas, "Moon-turtle" T-shirts, and colored socks in the gym, or charge defiantly up the down stairway. Best of all, anyone can roam the halls without the sanction of a pass.

When the moon hits your eye like a big piece of pie . . .

JUNIOR DANCE

The E-room was submerged in an underwater theme of sea-weed, sunken treasure chests, and mermaids. The fascinated juniors drifted into "Ocean Fantasia." A five-legged octopus dangled omnipotently from the ceiling, over couples dancing to the music of Harry Hershey's orchestra. The four hours allotted to this night of fantasy whisked by. Midnight approached and the couples floated up from the bottom of the sea to home and the world above.

SENIOR PROM

The boy nervously blurts, "By the way, how about coming to my Senior Prom—if you're not busy or anything." She casually accepts, and the date is made. From that time on Prom night hovers omnipresently, overshadowing other events on the calendar. Time becomes a paradox, passing too quickly for things like ordering flowers, renting a tux, or selecting a dress, while it seems unbearably slow in approaching the final event. Seniors make pre-Prom speculations: How are they going to decorate? They scour ettiquette books: Who buys the boutonniere? Confidences are exchanged: "If he doesn't like pink, I'll just croak." Anticipation comprises half of the Senior Prom. The rest of its magic is carried on music and captured in memories of "One Starry Night."

"All right. Wha's the wise guy that stale my batan?"

"Gee! I guess you are taller than I am."

Sleight of hand

It's . . . over.

The lost few moments of being a senior

Goodbye, good luck, for the 784th time. Goodbye, good luck . . .

BACCALAUREATE AND COMMENCEMENT

A beginning, an end, a turning point in the lives of some 950 students. A feeling: reflect, regret, exult. For seniors this will be their final assemblage, the last time which they will be a part of Euclid High. Some lose the tag of student. In two days they are transformed from kids into men and women, a part of the adult world. Others look forward to college, new friends, and experiences. All are no longer seniors; they bid Euclid farewell.
